FOREWORD

The Class of 1912 has completed its preparatory life—the first stage in every man's career. Thus far we have traveled about the same path as that taken by all the sons of Yale preceding us. We have been about as "green" as previous Freshmen and attained the dignity and honor of previous Seniors. Our future life has been fortified by failures, experienced and powerfully strengthened by ties of friendship which time can never rend asunder. From this moment our paths separate as each man strives to gain the goal of his ambition. What success we of 1912 are to attain as individuals and what permanent imprint we are to leave upon the world to distinguish us from other classes, the next forty years will determine. As time progresses may each one of us warm both hands before the fire of life, and further, may it be said of us as Lincoln wished it might be said of him, that "he plucked a weed and planted a flower, where he thought a flower would grow."

IN FRESHMAN YEAR

FRESHMAN YEAR

Reader, from time to time, the spirit of reminiscence is likely to come upon all of us. For you, various causes may call it forth. It may be a future Yale man sitting on your knee and pulling at your flowing moustache, untouched by razor since your Senior year, or perhaps, it may be one who is even then a Yale undergraduate, and with whom you desire to discuss the why and wherefore of certain checks signed by him and payable to one Louis Linder—to meet which you have had to dig deep down in your jeans. Whatever the cause may be, the spirit will come and then it may please you to recall how things were done in the “good old days,” when the Bijou burned with such a beneficial loss of life and even Mory’s was a sort of vague Paradise of upperclassmen who entered with dignified mien and heavy tread and emerged with a buoyancy and lightness of foot that was never wholly accounted for. If, however, such reminiscences have no interest for you, read no further. Your time would be wasted. If they have, read on, and think not harshly of the writer when personalities are indulged in; for, as Virgil so aptly puts it, “Forsan et haec olim meminisse juvabit.”

One balmy evening in the latter part of September, 1908, the city of New Haven was in a state of suppressed excitement. Excitement was in the air, on the college campus and even in the gaunt old elms themselves. Every restaurant was filled and Chapel Street was gaily decorated with various banners and signs of welcome to two mysterious persons designated as “1912” and 1911S.” The event that caused such a stir that night was the debut of the Class of 1912, to be held on the Yale Campus and to be later continued on York Street. As the evening wore on, the flow of people turned toward Osborn Hall, where the marshals were already busy organizing the parade. At eight o’clock, the band struck up “March on down the Field,” the classes fell in behind in order, and the parade started down Chapel Street. At Church Street it turned, came up Elm and entered the campus. The crowd was there first, however, and among it New Haven’s underworld was well represented. Woe to the unsuspecting student who left his cap resting unguarded on his head! Chase and Fitzgerald did a big business the next day.

THE FRESHMAN FOOTBALL TEAM

As the parade entered the Campus, the marshals, wearing their white sweaters with the coveted "Y," quickly cleared a ring, lined by the Senior class carrying torches—and how ancient and powerful those Seniors looked that night! The ring being formed, representatives of the Freshman and Sophomore classes were called upon to wrestle. The latter were quickly chosen but the former delayed the game, for none knew on whom to call. Eventually, however, the following teams were picked: Heavyweight, Cleveland, '11, v. Hochschild, '12; Middleweight, Prime, '11, v. Dunn, '12; Lightweight, Walker, '11, v. Russell, '12. The matches were hotly contested and if the Sophomores finally won, it was due to no lack of fight on the part of their opponents. Each man did credit to himself and his class. 1911 did actually win all the matches.

Nominally the wrestling matches should have ended the events of the evening, but far from it. York Street was the next center of attraction and many unofficial deeds of darkness were perpetrated. First, the Freshman-Sophomore rush was held, the former gathering at Elm Street and the latter at Library. Having massed compactly so as to impede running as much as possible, and having carefully pulled the trolleys of any interfering street cars from the wires, the two classes playfully rushed each other, each individual being indefinitely determined to do something terrible to somebody. They met in front of the palatial Pierson Hall and became a swaying, grunting, and, miserabile dictu, a cursing mass of humanity. Who the officials were and what their method of scoring, we know not, but out of respect to tradition, the Freshmen were declared victorious. The rush being over, the crowd largely dispersed—the Freshmen to their rooms and most of the Sophomores to the same rooms. Neither time nor space nor discretion permits us to speak of the events that followed—of the Schlitzian and Blue Ribbonio barber shops that were improvised, and many diabolio schemes of torture. Suffice it to say that York Street was officially undisturbed for the night, save only for an occasional group that marched up and down calling out in authoritative tones, “Ho, Fresh, put out that light.” So 1912 made its debut, to play its part on the stage of college life. Hereafter, it was a part of Yale, and we trust, did credit to that part.

After that opening night, class distinction was forgotten in the routine work. The next morning a call for Freshman football candidates was issued and on the following Monday some 90 men trotted around the Freshman Field under the leadership of Coach Chester Copman, of 1909. Few suspected that in that awkward, lanky squad were hidden many who were destined to bring fame and credit to the University. Such names as Howe, Francis and Paul were as yet unknown in the football world. Under the conscientious direction of Coach Copman, the 1912 football team gradually developed. The crowning point in its success came when it defeated Andover by a good score and then the Princeton Freshmen at Princeton by a single touchdown. During the week that followed, the team was called over to the varsity field to furnish a subject upon which the 'Varsity might try a few offensive experiments. This was undoubtedly excellent for the 'Varsity, but when the Harvard team came down the next Saturday, it was a battered bunch of players that went out to meet them. They put up a game fight but Harvard won by the score of 6—0. That they did not take this defeat too seriously was amply proven at the banquet held that night, when Captain Harry Vaughan acted as toastmaster and everyone had something to say. While the main interest of the Fall term was football, due credit should be given to those men who had undertaken that most unblest and thankless of all jobs, heeling the “News.” From the Fall competition, ending in the latter part of

THE FRESHMAN BASEBALL TEAM

February, Bullitt, Heald and Griffin were elected to the editorial board.

Christmas vacation came and went and when the class returned for the long, hard drudge of the Winter term, it had become fairly well acclimated and felt that it really was a part of the University. Consequently when the call was issued for Apollo Glee Club trials, 1912 was well represented. To be bromidic, many were called, but few were chosen. Arbuckle, Francis, Henderson, Squire and Parcells, however, played their part in the capital punishment of "Mother of Men" and "B. C. Y." at the first rehearsals.

There was consolation for the unsuccessful candidates, however, for trials for the class glee club soon followed, and all the self-esteemed song birds appeared. The fact that the class, as a whole, was exceedingly handsome, made it very difficult for George Pomeroy and Clarence Allis, the coaches, to discriminate, and consequently the original makeup of the club was large. A cut soon followed, when it was announced that several trips were to be taken and that each man must pay his own expenses. The principal trips the club took were to Oaksmere school, to Bridgeport, and to Northampton, and finally to College Street Hall for the benefit of the Freshman Navy. No doubt the Freshman Navy was thankful for this for it was made richer by some $5.25. The trip to Northampton should be mentioned, for the peerless nightingale, Beebe, sang several solos. After the concert, various members of the Club went around and serenaded the inmates of Smith College until requested by the local Jim Donnelly to "move on and let the ladies sleep." The remainder of the evening and cash was spent in general merrymaking at the "Draper."

But the Glee Club was not the only activity of the class during the long winter term. We must not forget the championship hockey team—the first Yale Freshman Hockey Team to win such a championship. The final game was played under the leadership of Captain Howe against the Harvard Freshmen, and was won by the score of 3—2. The next week the team held a banquet in New York. At its close, they went to see two or three Anna Helds in an equal number of Misses Innocence. But be that as it may, they deserved anything they wanted.

On Washington's Birthday, 1912 was again called upon to defend its honor against 1911, in the annual fench rush. Immediately after chapel, 1911 hurried out and took their positions on the fence, armed with bamboo canes and adorned with tall hats. 1912 formed their ranks in front of Dwight Hall, and, at a given signal, "O! the wild charge they made; all the world wondered" why they were awarded the decision. The object was to see who could get the most hands on the fence in 15 minutes. As no one made any attempt to keep hold of the fence after time was called, and no one tried to count the number of those who couldn't let go owing to the person of some Sophomore superimposed above him, the decision was probably made out of respect to tradition. Anyway, 1912 retired to York

THE FRESHMAN GLEE CLUB

Street for repairs, filled with the conviction that they at least were doing their share in upholding Yale customs. As a fitting close for the Winter term, 1912 witnessed the celebration in New Haven of the inauguration of the first Yale President of the United States, on March 4, 1909.

With the coming of spring, the baseball, track and crew squads appeared in public. All through the winter, these teams had been practicing indoors, and now came out under the leadership of Captains Merritt, Gardner and Baker to practice, with a firm determination to take vengeance on Harvard for the defeat suffered at her hand in the fall. But "the best-laid plans of mice and teams, etc."

THE FRESHMAN HOCKEY TEAM

They were doomed to disappointment. We have no particular excuse to offer. The baseball team defeated Princeton, but lost to Harvard, playing but one game and one inning of the second game in the latter series. The track team was humiliated by both Princeton and Harvard; and as for the crew, the Red boat crossed the line some twelve lengths in advance of the Blue. Clearly the course should have been longer, so that Yale 1912 could have had an opportunity to catch up. From the standpoint of athletic victories, the Spring term of the Freshman year of 1912 could not be called a grand success. But that is the pessimist's viewpoint. Like the football defeat these later ones were quickly forgotten, and in many cases thoroughly drowned at the banquets after the final contests. Freshman year ended with a last clash with our Sophomore brothers—a clash, however, of wit, not of brawn, in the shape of the Fence oration. Though the class had valiantly fought for and won that same fence some five months before, still the desirable privilege of possession by squatter's right was withheld until after this oration. John Young received the fence in behalf of 1912 from Monty Wooley in behalf of 1911, and thenceforth it was safely guarded by the class until delivered in like manner into the keeping of 1913.

On the whole, 1912 was an exceedingly well-behaved class. But sometimes even the best of us step off the straight and narrow path. So it was one warm spring evening, when a number of the class were seated on the porch of 250 Garlands, expressing their comfort and satisfaction with the world in general in a little after-supper song. Everything was peaceful until a large delegation of Sheff Freshmen appeared and lustily cheered 1912. The greeting was returned and in a short time most of the dormitories were emptied into the street. Something had to happen, and something did. A procession soon started over York Street, down Chapel and into the Hof-Brau. The sojourn here was short and the crowd moved on to the Bijou. Needless to say, they were not admitted, and there being an officer of the law barring the passage, they withdrew peacefully and made for the Grand. Here something slipped. There was a rush. The ushers, ticket-takers and brass rails were swept away and the mob was about to enter the theatre proper when a crowd of police appeared on the scene. Immediately there was a rush to get out again, and every impeding obstacle, including the glass doors and the stands containing the likenesses of the beauties even then treading the light fantastic on the stage above, were swept away. In the row, a policeman put Billy Howe under arrest, and when he attempted to remonstrate, the former began to beat him with his club. Tommy Tomlinson suggested that the cop might be a little less rough and was also promptly arrested for interfering. So these two were marched off to jail, followed by a howling mob. The final upshot of the matter was that both were tried and fined ten dollars. The class was much benefited by the spree.

Over on York Street, there is a gentleman much beloved by Freshmen, for it is through him only that a man can make a success of his college career. Besides, he had a kennel of dogs, whose nocturnal music lulls to sleep the inmates of "250." He is very careful of these dogs and hates to have anything disturb them. Therefore it vexed him to have the rowdy youth of "250" play ball in their own back yard, for the noise made his dogs nervous. Well, after he had stopped them playing out there a number of times, the patience of "250" gave out. A meeting was held in Jake Westerman's room and the plan of action discussed. It was decided that each man should provide himself with ammunition consisting of aged fruit and eggs and station himself out of sight behind a fence that separated the two yards. At about 9 p. m. every one was in position. Someone threw a brick at the dog kennels and out rushed the gentleman in question to see who was disturbing his pups. The aim of each man was slow and deliberate. Not for nothing did "250" possess such baseball players as Charlie Arbuthnot, Chat Thomasson, Joe Kimball and Dick Merritt. Each shot went true and the enemy hastily retreated. It pains us to have to omit the sequel—how the lady of the house appeared to have her say in the matter and give her opinion of "250" and how enthusiastically she was received; and how Joe Kimball carried on a long conversation over the telephone with the object of attack, much to the latter's discomfort. Suffice it to say that, henceforth, the inmates of "250" were no longer troubled.

And so we reach the end of Freshman year—a year of irresponsible enjoyment from beginning to end. If we all did not take advantage of all the opportunities it offered, at least we do not feel that our time was wasted. We made many friends and few enemies and it was not without a little sigh of regret that we broke our York Street affiliations and became merged and absorbed in the more responsible and less carefree life of the University.

"United we stand, divided we fall," is a fine old adage, and one that embodies a truth which was nearly proved by the Sophomore year of our class. Divided we were. There is no doubt about it; but I think we rather tipped badly than actually fell. I refer, of course, to that wave of reorganization which split our class so successfully into two factions known as "Welch" and "Hutch." In Freshman year, no one expects to find much class unity. It is hard enough for the Freshmen to coddle themselves into receiving vigor from New Haven's luxuriant ozone, eat Library Street food and attend hygeine lectures, without expecting them to meet and mingle to any great extent with their classmates. But in Sophomore year one is supposed to discover, by being thrown near to them, that "the sad bird you saw across the street last year" is a pretty good sort of a fellow after all. and that the merchant princes of Freshman year have been so successfully robbed by the parasitic hordes of York Street, that they can mingle, with no visible damage to themselves, with their less prosperous classmates. But our class, unfortunately, underwent little of this process. Instead of being put in a position that would make for unity, we found ourselves in one that tended toward infinite subdivision. Classes are too prone, under ordinary conditions, to split up into cliques, without having that inclination doubled. This cheery situation was further brightened by the fact that our class had a record-breaking number of rated members.

From this pessimistic preamble, the reader will, no doubt, expect to find recorded at least some score of murders ascribed to our class. But our acts of physical violence were limited to attacks on the Freshman class, and stopped when Russell, Proctor and Tomlinson had pummeled and thrown their Freshman opponents in the opening night wrestling.

This victory gave us the courage to get together in a class meeting a little later, to elect an assistant football manager. The successful candidate was Kirk Kaynor. Not content to have Kaynor spend all his time caring for upperclassmen, and men from other departments, Howe, Paul and Francis made places for themselves on the Varsity football team. By this time our class was assured that its temporal power was in good hands; so the spiritual was entrusted to McClure, Proctor, Howe and Banghart, in the position of the four deacons.

This left nothing but the aesthetic side to be cared for; and as our class had found from our first meeting that it could convene under one roof without coming to blows, so the experiment was tried again during the fall with the result that G. C. Murphy, S. Pittman, A. Howe, H. T. Clement and R. A. Garner were elected as a Sophomore German Committee. The election of this committee caused a rumor to be spread around that there was going to be a Prom. held some time during the winter term, and as none of our class had ever attended a Prom. before, they looked forward to this affair with no little glee. Some went so far in their enthusiasm as to invite girls and make out dance cards. There was no getting out of it then, so late in January the Prom. was held. Although the Boston was then at its height, the affair passed off with no great loss of life. But far better was it, say I—to have a few honest souls die fighting for the mastery of the Bostonean conception of the Terpsichorean art, than to have them live on and degenerate under the seductive influence of the dances now prevalent.

In the lull that followed the Prom, Alec Tener and Gerald Murphy rose to the position of assistant manager of the Dramatic Association and Musical Club, respectively; Morse Ely was appointed manager of the basketball team; Ted Stevens of the soccer team, and Ted Townsend of the tennis team.

But simple things like appointments do not seem to satisfy our class. We wanted big elections and were not happy until we had another. This election was one of those hectic affairs that string out through several evenings. It was held for the purpose of electing all the remaining major managers and the Freshman managers; and as our class had a habit of doing whatever they started out to do, they were elected. Don Hyde became assistant manager of baseball, Fritz Mullins of track, and Henry Street of crew. The Freshman managers elected were Vin Murphy for football; Win Strout for baseball; Cub Hartley for track and Pete Henderson for crew. Later, in an unguarded mood and by way of recreation, the class elected L. M. Cornwall fence orator.

Undaunted reader—for such you are, if you have read this far, you are, perhaps, inclined to believe that our class did nothing but hold elections. Well, that was our favorite pastime as a class. Individually, the inhabitants of the Hutchinson sizzled before the fires of iniquity, while the residents in Welch paved a place with good intentions, which the subsequent effectuation of these intentions will never force them to enter. A detailed account of the conduct of either party would be unsatisfactory, for that of the former graces better the memory than the written page, while that of the latter shares the common boredom of all faultless careers.

During the spring, Carhart and Merritt represented our class on the baseball nine and Bob Gardner and Boyd won points for Yale and Y's for themselves on the track team. The other members of the class indulged with different degrees of success in these, and the rapidly increasing number of other activities. We also took our recreation a little more seriously than we have done since then, patronizing Savin Rock, the Yacht Club and other miscalled "watering" places, with a zeal unrivalled by the bee itself.

But for all the space that has been given to it, the main feature of our Sophomore year was not who made the football team or the chess team; who was elected manager of this, or recorder of that. Every class has athletes and grinds; business men and debutants. But with the closing of the "Hutch" our class heard the last death knell rung for "Old Yale." It saw crêpe hung on the spirit of "Gaudeamus igitur," and traditions made to show cash value or get out. It saw the movement firmly planted which expects to prove that the man with lead in his boots is far superior to the one who might be said—sentimentally perhaps—to have a few grains of gold in his heart. What the outcome of this will be is a mere matter of speculation. But there is no doubt that new Yale with her infinite organization is keeping pace with the age; this age of subways and nervous breakdowns; the trusts and child labor. May they both fare well.

JUNIOR YEAR

It was with a delicious feeling of growing importance that we took our stand, one class nearer the proud but wheezy Second Connecticut band, the opening night of Junior year. To march behind the Seniors was something, but to stand nonchalantly by and watch others charge to seemingly inevitable death in front of Garland's—that was sublime! And then the Oval, with its new turf, pine forest, and best of all, a brand-new fence on which to whittle and to sing our so-called glees. After all, a Junior is a man of some considerable importance. As usual, everybody visited Billy's polite emporium of spiritual aid to see the historical beer shampoo administered to an unhappy Freshman, but as usual that personage was not forthcoming. How timid is the gentle Freshman. Since nobody volunteered for the tonic treatment, it was necessary to adjourn to Mr. Morey's Temple Bar where, as was our right, we took possession of the room set aside especially for Juniors and such worthies, and showed our younger brothers what a wild place college could be, as we sat around the big table cussing and drinking lemonade.

Ah brethren! will you ever forget the lovely Daffydills which decorated the field of undergraduate thought that Fall. If Pete Francis has adroitly dodged the eleven men on the Wesleyan team, and three times carried the pigskin triumphantly over the goal for three beautiful touchdowns, how many has Paul Brinsmade? Quick, Walter! the iodine; he's done it again!

We were just getting out of the long-established custom of going to Lampson to see the Dean, and were forming the habit of dropping into South Middle for our morning confessions, when Prom. elections confronted us. Bob Gardner, we chose our handsome chairman, and by his side we placed Harold Clement to manage the floor. Brave Art Howe and Stew Pittman, Gerald Murphy, Dummy Hyde, the hoary Bill Griffin and Francis Boyd made up the chorus. All men of subtle joints and winning ways.

Turning from the gloomy atmosphere of Al Osborne, we found ourselves in the midst of a wildly exciting football season. The opening games were easily won and we were just beginning to pat ourselves on the back when one sunshiny afternoon at West Point, we woke up and discovered that it was all a delusion. Six to nothing in favor of the Army gave us a jolt. The next week Vanderbilt 0—Yale 0, cast a dusky gloom over the Campus. But alas, classmates! when Brown rolled up eighteen points against Eli, and did not allow the latter to approach her goal, groans went up to the unpropitious god of the pigskin. Harvard had a wonderful team; Princeton was in fine form and confident; and as far as we could see there was no hope for us. But Tom Shevlin was imported from the West, and somehow behind closed gates, a team was turned out in one week which, mirabile dictu, went down to the Nassau jungle, caught the over-confident pussy by her tail, and tied five triumphant knots therein, allowing only three tallies against Yale. Needless to say, with the score 3 to 0 in favor of Princeton, the Yale stands went wild with enthusiasm, when Art Howe threw a long forward pass to Kilpatrick, who carried it over for a touchdown. It seemed incredible that this could be the team which had been so thoroughly routed by Brown one week before. But we loaded car after car with Princeton shekels and set out for New Haven to face Harvard—Harvard bristling with success, with confidence, with the strongest team ever brought to New Haven. Besides those lovely creatures we sat, forgetting their merry chatter and cunning wiles; yea, even forgetting our roommate's jewelry placed pro tem in hock to secure a New Haven chariot with two fiery steeds and that large bunch of Monro's extra-fragrant violets; forgetting everything while McDevitt, Charlie Paul and Art Howe fought out that memorable 0 to 0 game. Two months later the team elected Art Howe captain for 1911.

While football had been occupying our attention, the cross-country team had been hard at work eating up the weary miles, and in November we were proud to own George Marsh captain for 1912. With the help of Zip Cornwall, Worthington, Jake Dickenson, Woodruff and Dawson, the soccer team was proceeding successfully.

But let us examine Dwight Hall. What noises issue from its every aperture these brisk nights! Above the rest we catch Pete Francis's squeal. "That's a hell of a note," cries Coach Goodale, while Bob Gardner and Roger Squire help rend the air asunder.

For the last time, the austere patriarchs on the dismal walls of old Alumni scowled in ill-concealed agony as Harold Clement, Ed Twombly, Stan Gifford, Reddy Day, Stew Pittman and Hank Knight industriously picked the tinkling strings, and across the campus in Osborne's mystic cellar Jack Parson, Ted Stevens and Billy Bullitt manufactured and rendered some clever lines in "Il Ventaglio," while Ek Tener manfully pumped at the fountain; Mac King with the baton and Cub Hartley starred as assistant book manager. Then all these organizations packed their silk hats and frock coats, at the same time taking the exams. and learning new lines and tunes, and one fine morning the class disbanded in search of Yuletide merriment.

Witness the awed parents as the eldest son, a Junior at Yale, nonchalantly swinging his stick, descends upon the ancestral domicile. Father respectfully removes his hat, while mother and the girls, walking to church Christmas Day, displaying the family heir, neglect to notice several of the neighbors. Maxima debetur puero reverentia.

Two weeks later, all during the rainy night, we again trudged wearily through the old station and up Meadow Street, rich with that deep black slush so dear to every son of Yale, and at eight-ten and one-half, there we were in chapel, bemoaning life in general. But what is this that cheers those first few days of misery? "Hey Bill, is Sadie coming? Harold says that nobody's wearing frock coats any more; better get a cut-away. Yes, Carl is going to leave town; says he can't stand the women." In fact, classmates, the greatest Junior Prom. ever captured was about to be exhibited in New Haven. Will you ever forget with what trepidation you donned the newest and the best, and took your stand fearfully among the other social lions at the station? And then the giggling girls gushing from every car in great profusion. Big girls, little girls, tall girls, short girls, thick girls, thin girls, white girls, pink girls, every kind and description, all carefully concealed under scrap baskets and umbrella stands, which in those days served the double purpose of household conveniences and Parisian hats.

That evening sitting beside the dearest of the dear at the play, what though the heroine roared, "Kiss me, dear feller," in a fearful basso? What though the fan was lost, and with it the plot mislaid? What though Bill Bullitt did stamp and rage at fair Candida? Who cared? Who noticed?

One by one the great events sped by. Monday afternoon we assembled at Mrs. Stoddard's to spill tea on those dear little frocks, and in the evening we clapped hysterically at the glee club concert and then participated in the most magnificent Junior German which Woolsey Hall has ever witnessed, under the leadership of Harold Clement.

Last of all the Prom! How can we describe the beauty and joy of that memorable festivity?

"A thousand hearts beat happily, and when Music arose with its voluptuous swell,
Soft eyes look'd love to eyes which spoke again,
And all went happy as a marriage bell."

But hush! hark! * * * *

There is another side to the story. "Dearie, some rude man stepped right on my new yeller slippers. I wish yuh wouldn't push me into every feller that way. Don't take such long steps. Can't you hear the music, Percy, or what's the matter? Dearie, really we better sit down. I do love to sit and watch the people." What a tragic story is there expressed. But after all, there was much to be seen in that crowded, seething mass of merry dancers. Here a loving couple

"Cheek to cheek and jaw to jaw,
Bump their way across the floor" and there the new "turkey trot" is being admirably performed. Everywhere shirts and collars are becoming uncertain, and signs of fearful distress and supreme bliss are apparent. But at last, like all other Proms. this greatest of the great comes to an end; the last Juliet departs and with heavy hearts we turn our attention to the busy world of college affairs.

THE ARMORY

First and foremost, tying bowlines and double-half hitches in themselves, Williams, Lehman and Eddie Ruge were upholding the honor of the class on the Gym team. Then too, the famous swimming team of 1911 took all prizes with Palmer and Church on the water polo team; Bob Loree in the plunge and Jack Stoddard as champion fancy diver.

Indoor track kept John Farrar, Jean Connolly, Phil Platt, Larkin and Gardner busy, while Bill Bullitt so monopolized debating, that he alone from the class, finally made the team and was subsequently elected captain.

Wild, Stewart, Pittman and Brinsmade were playing on the basketball team; while Morse Ely as manager, piloted from city to city with pronounced skill. Outside the winter was exceedingly warm, yet somehow the hockey team, without the help of the rink, played off the full number of matches. Ezzie O'Brien managed the team and Carhart, Art Howe and Dick Merritt represented 1912.

As spring drew on and the omnipresent cohorts of sparrows on the campus were reinforced by lusty robins from Palm Beach, our Phi Beta Kappa members elected their officers. Jake Bell became president of that austere organization; Frank Gates, vice-president; Johnny Larus, secretary; Ted Townsend, treasurer; and Tweedy, keeper of the archives.

The 1911 Board of the "Oldest College Daily" resigned about this time and Bill Griffin started writing daily editorials with that desperation so characteristic of the chairman of the News. Heald, Augustine, Bullitt, Day and Wiggin made up the editorial staff; while Harris very adroitly managed the finances of the organization. Hickman, as chairman of the Courant was assisted by Burr Chapman, Eric Dawson, George Dimock, Spug Goodhart, and Martin LeBoutillier. Evans Bartlett and Stan Hallé made up the business department.

Our funny men were headed by Percy Orthwein, who reconcocted old jokes with the help of De Beixedon, Dimock, Greenwood, Goodhart, Pangburn and Jefferson. Tomlinson and Don McConaughy won the much coveted managerships. And so our class, well-saddled with weighty responsibility, issued from a rather mild winter somewhat the worse for wear.

Far be it from us to dive into a soul inspiring sonnet on "Spring, Beautiful Spring," but there is much to be said in its favor after all. Meditating some such profound philosophy, we again acquired the old habit of draping ourselves on the outskirts of a Yale Field car, and being whizzed out to the bleachers, where, once more, we could cuss the innocent umpire and watch Harold Carhart pullin' 'em in, while Dick Merritt spectacularly scooped up hot liners on third base. Although the team did not meet with its usual successes at the end of the season, the reason is obvious. 1912 was represented only by the two lusties above mentioned. Dick Merritt was elected captain for the following year.

Across the field, our classmates were more numerous. On the track Farrar, Larkin, Gardner, Boyd, Parsons, Marsh and Platt all took an active part, and under this abundant support we gave Harvard her usual sound drubbing.

The tennis team, under the able leadership of Frank Gates, and with the help of Chat Thomasson, and Joe Coté, proved very successful against Harvard and Princeton.

The Spring Regatta, for the first time in many years, took place on the harbor instead of Lake Whitney, and was the occasion for more excitement and enthusiasm than ever. In the first place, the new George Adey boathouse was formally opened, and then too, two 1912 boats took first honors in the class races. Let us not follow the 'Varsity to New London, for unfortunately 1912 was not represented thereon.

And now the year was almost gone, and out of the great sandhole where three months ago had stood the palsied old New Haven House, had risen the iron marrows of the Taft to be. The town was noisy with men of all ages, and apparently from all countries on this terrestrial sphere. Amid this cosmopolitan gathering we hurried, busy and responsible Juniors, who felt with the near approach of Senior cares, that our presence was all-important to the closing of the college year.

The hot summer afternoons of that last week, and the noisy, warm, bustling evenings flew rapidly by. Saturday night, Bill Bullitt, mounted on a frightened white palfry, in the light of the real and the artificial moon, performed the title-rôle in "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" on the campus. A few happy care-free days we spent in watching the unexplainable actions of the motley graduates; in trips to Savin's rock-bound shore to eat the rubber clams and ride the painted horses; in trying to give the Seniors' girls a really good time—and then the official year came to an end. With perspiration, we tagged our furniture "Vanderbilt Hall"; sold our winter suits, and with a feeling that our underclassman days were over, went our several ways.

As for the Campus beautiful, with its new grass plots, verdant shrubbery, renovated walks, electric light and telephone improvements, we hesitate to describe the effect on our returning wanderer.

"There is a harmony in Autumn and a lustre in its sky, which tho' the summer is not heard nor seen; as if it could not be, as if it had not been!"

We hastily pass over the Freshman Rush with its ever decreasing ferocity, and the wrestling matches hitherto looked forward to by New Haven's town gents with their taking ways, but now, thanks be to Allah, delivered from the pestiferous hat-snatcher and his gang.

That hustling, bustling restlessness which always accompanies the unpacking of trunks, hanging of pictures, and likewise of ye ancient curtains which mother provided Freshman year, soon subsides into peaceful hours, cheerful fires (wood not produced by Klig), funny stories and Fatimas. At last we are Seniors! What a flush of pleasure mounts the Senioric brow, when hatless he strolls across the Campus with all the dignity of a circus elephant, to make his first bow to Prexi.

The early Fall term passes quickly enough with walks to the field to help the coaches pick the team, energetic renewal of extra-curriculum activities, and most diligent application to books. The Brown game arrives, and with it that glorious array of buffoonery—the Whiffenpoofs. Many moons will wane ere we forget the Lost Money Lizzy,

THE CLASS DAY COMMITTEE

Mutt and Jeff, Doc Crane, Atwood in his coast-to-coast biplane, and that great skirmish between the Turkish and Italian navies. The cat, we fear, will not come back. "Am I right Aug.?"

Next comes the Princeton game with both disappointments and pleasures. A gloomy day, a wet field, a slippery ball, a fumble, and a touchdown for Princeton. "But it's an ill wind that blows no good," or words to that effect. No sooner recovered from the shock of our defeat than we are treated to the greatest farce Yale had witnessed since the days of the Fireman Fights. The Hyp. Riot stands out as the crowning coup d'état of the Class of 1912. To quote from the News: "Never was a crowd handled with such brilliant display of the lack of the elementary rudiments of plain common horse sense." Louie C. can vouch for this.

THE 1912 VARSITY FOOTBALL TEAM

Western papers had poor Gaby all but murdered by them rough Yale stoodents, but we of the inner circle, meaning of course, the police, Hyp management, faculty and students, have learned to look at the matter from a different viewpoint and have all learned a lesson thereby. When last heard of, Gaby was being interviewed by an Egyptian reporter as to her opinions of Americans, and Yale men in particular. Moral: It pays to advertise.

The following Saturday was a contrast in many ways. A glorious day, the Harvard Stadium in all its splendor, bedecked with a seething mass of animated red and blue, a clean plucky fight, plenty of thrills, and a well-earned score of 0—0. Boston seldom sees a double celebration, but little was left undone on this glorious occasion.

Two events of great importance are next brought to our attention: the founding of the Elizabethan Club and the institution of the Gay White Way. Comparisons are often odious, but these two affairs were strangely similar in their deviltry. That nocturnal pageant of well groomed business men, flashy floats, and hosts of fiery steeds from Kirk's Palace des Chevaux will often stir our breasts with a feeling of restlessness as it did on that memorable eve.

And now for our dear teachers and their attractive exams. Nuff Ced!! We all managed to survive and enjoy a well earned rest. The musical clubs went South to enjoy warm climate, warm hospitality and warm drinks. Parlor snakes and conservative fussers were in great abundance. The Dramat. took the longest trip in the history of the organization and grew so elated over their success, that they almost forgot to cut down the leading man one night in the hanging scene. The hockey and basketball teams likewise had successful trips; the former to their utter surprise finding a new white hope in their midst while sojourning in Chicago.

Our return was somewhat cheered at finding the long promised showers of Vanderbilt Hall finally installed. We now planned many hours of serious work, rejoicing in the fact that the harmonious anvil chorus in the hallways was finally at an end. But no such luck. Prom. talk is already in the air. The News is full of bewildering directions; collectors are in great abundance, and the Record has already begun the preparation of that famous concoction—The Owl Egg Nog, which was destined to make Owly forever famous as a Prom. entertainer.

The great week finally arrives.

GERMANS INVADE NEW HAVEN.

says the News. But, O mirabile dictu, them goils, them decorations, those Taft House, and them cab fares. To be sure the Senior dance reached heights which the other Germans attained not. (Taft House, top floor). As for the Prom. proper, in general we must admit it the best we have ever attended. No polkas, barn dances and like forms of annoyance, but one simple wriggling rythm of Bunny Hugs, Monkey Scrambles, Come to me Kids, Aeroplane Glides, etc. And now for the fond farewells, empty pockets, post-prom gossip, and once again, Fatimas. (No, this is not an ad.)

This restful atmosphere of lackadaisical equanimity is soon put to an end by the all engrossing topic of politics. Who will be our next President? With all the sobriety of a cheer leader, the students of the entire University rush to cast their votes. This straw ballot resulted in a decisive victory for Taft, with Wilson a creditable second. Having decided so important a question, we next find it our duty to fill out the class statistical blanks. The results were extremely interesting in showing the diversity or rather perversity of opinions as to who was handsomest, funniest, sportiest, most popular and the like.

And now for Washington's Birthday, with its usual cries of "Down with the Rush and recitations," and a long cheer for a holiday. The holiday was as usual, not forthcoming, and we had to stay here, the Freshmen in particular, and take our punishment. To lend to the excitement of this occasion, Connecticut Hall most conveniently decided to catch fire.

Oh the prayers were many, and the prayers were long, that with engine and hose, all would go wrong, but the Faculty thought 'twould be no joke, if the marks and cuts went up in smoke. (Apologies for this our first poem.)

Matters were soon put in order by Jim Donnelly and Bud Weiser, together with the timely aid of Bill Taft, who happened to come on for the Rush. We quote the following graphic description from the Record: "As President Taft drew near the Campus, smoke could be seen issuing from the windows and the fire engines dashed up, closely followed by the hook and ladder wagon. 'There must be a fire somewhere,' remarked the President."—New Haven Daily Paper.

As soothing syrup, we soon found ourselves engrossed (German Pun) in the publication banquets, which were somewhat larger and more entertaining, we feel, than ever before.

And now the gloomy thought of 'only three months more' looms up before us. It is hard to realize that we have spent four years at Yale—such busy, joyous years! A baseball season, a few exams, one last Prom and "Towered cities please us then, and the busy hum of men." To be sure we have not solved such problems as, "How shall Mory's be retained?" "What are we going to do with the Dwight Hall Grillers?" and "Where is the Lost Flagg?" but nevertheless we do know that we have learned much, accomplished many things, and above all, formed friendships that will last through life.

*"The friendships of the world are oft Confederacies in vice, or leagues of pleasure;
Ours has severest virtue for its basis,
And such a friendship ends not but with life."*

OBITUARY

Aaron Sevair Dettra, only child of John M. Dettra, lived at Norristown, Pennsylvania. He prepared for Yale at the Penn Charter School, Philadelphia, where he made the highest stand in scholarship ever obtained in the school. He was awarded the Philadelphia Yale Scholarship.

In Freshman year he won the Woolsey Prize for excellence in Greek, Latin and Mathematics, and stood second in his class for the year. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

His premature death from scarlet fever shortly after Easter in his Sophomore year, came as a great shock to all his friends. Although one of the youngest men in his class, he was distinguished for his brilliance in studies, his attractive personality, his frank manner and his strong Christian character. His splendid life has been a great inspiration to all those who knew him intimately. In his memory, a prize in mathematics in the college has been established.

FRANKLIN H. GATES.

George Deming Loomis was born at Granby, Connecticut, July 20, 1889. He prepared for college at the Hartford High School, where he was captain of the tennis team.

He was a devoted son, and a sincere friend whose loss was a deep blow to all into whose life he had come. He bore all suffering without complaint and brought happiness into whatever he attempted.

He died at Hartford, September 2, 1910, following an operation for appendicitis.

CROMPTON JOHNSON.

John Butler Woodward, Jr., was born December 30, 1889, in Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, where he lived until his death in Freshman year from scarlet fever, on January 13, 1909. His father was J. B. Woodward, '83, and his mother was Marion Hillard. He prepared at the Taft School and in college roomed at 237 York.

By his bouyant and sunny disposition, by his frankness and spontaneity, and by his high ideals, he had endeared himself to his friends, and his friends were numbered by his acquaintances. The sweetness of his disposition and his exceptional personal magnetism made him a leader without exertion on his part and the career which lay open before him was one to excite the envy of the majority. With his kindliness of nature was combined a richness of mind and a sense of humor that is rare indeed. The loss which his death occasioned the class and the college can be realized only by those who knew him best. As President Hadley said of him, "He showed promise of adding lustre to one of the names that have made Yale famous."

Besides his father, G. S. Woodward, '87, T. R. Hillard, '83, Harry Hillard, '83, all uncles, Stanley Woodward, '56, his grandfather, and other relatives too numerous to mention preceded him at Yale.

CHARLES B. WALLER.

CHANGES DURING OUR COLLEGE COURSE

Before that impenetrable fog, the mist of ages, beclouds the indelible mark of the Class of 1912 upon the ledger of the College, it seems best to inscribe in black and white some of the more salient accomplishments witnessed by the aforesaid class, in order that they may be read in the future. With this slight attack of Shandyism (not to be too stern)—or perhaps slapstick humor, it seems to be up to the writer and his unfortunate reader (notice his singularity) to delve into a conglomeration of unparalleled and uninterred dead dope. To be quite candid though, a larger number of important changes in the life of the College have taken place within the past four years, than most people would suppose. In Freshman year the worm-eaten and otherwise nutritious books of the Linonian and Brothers Library were transferred from their former Gothic tomb to the Chittenden Library, and the former splendid bit of real architecture was given over entirely to storeroom purposes. For one term the undergraduates were startled by the appearance of the Student Daily Post. Taking things chronologically, the next change is noted in the minor sports, where the system of combined subscriptions and a fairer method of electing managers, were adopted. Dwight Hall inaugurated its policy of having prominent outside men lead the Wednesday evening Bible Classes, formerly conducted by undergraduates. The Debating Association, emulating Cole Porter's Fi Fi, adopted a reformed constitution and formed class clubs, but unlike Fi Fi, it never landed on its feet until two years later.

Even the musical world effected some changes. A University Band was started during the fall and managed to pass enough bad notes to gain admittance to several football games. In intercollegiate wrangling the Triangular Debate was first held in 1909. The management of the Freshman Major Athletic Teams was first entrusted to the hands of expectant Juniors during our infancy at Yale. Certain leaders of the powers above saw fit to suggest a Senior Council and the plan was carried into successful effect. Work on the Carnegie Swimming Pool was begun and rapid progress made. The Yale Banner and the Pot-Pourri, casting aside their former double lives, promised to love, cherish, honor and obey as a single unit for the future. The University major managers were first chosen by class meetings instead of University mass meetings, during our Freshman year. The Dramat. gave its first Commencement play in June, 1909, initiating this pleasing policy with "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

In the spring the young men's thoughts lightly turned to that Oval question, which was not finally decided until our class adopted campus concentration for Seniors. Omega Lambda Chi was rejuvenated on a larger scale and made more humorous. For the last time Lake Whitney's waters were churned by the oars of the Spring Regatta and other shellfish. Then, last but not least, after we had enjoyed the privilege of one year's guidance by Dean Wright, that honored gentleman retired from active work in the college.

Sophomore year introduced to us our present Dean, Mr. Jones, who has already laid the foundations of a reputation for squareness and popularity which will equal Dean Wright's. Our class made the first break toward campus rooms for Sophomores, and about half the class was housed in Welch and Lawrence, while the Hutch still contained its share of the litter. The new rules, famous for their burlesque posters, and infamous at first for their apparent severity, were brought forth into the world. Haughton Hall was first occupied, having been completed during the summer. The corporation, startled by Elinor Glyn, changed the Christmas vacation from three weeks to two, and moved back the Tiger game and Commencement one week earlier. The college budget was transferred from the Treasurer's to the Dean's office, and Treasurer McClung was called to Washington. Much to the joy of the Sub-Freshmen and some others the entrance examination conditions were changed and a certificate given for each subject passed, regardless of the number. The new boathouse was planned and—shall we say ground or water?—was broken for the foundations. The Carnegie Pool was formally opened with a splash. Dwight Hall adopted a plan to have prominent men address the Sunday night meetings on the ethics of various branches of business. The Chapel exit rush was discussed, but not relieved. An important step, indeed a long one from the campus, was taken when the Sloane Physics Laboratory was allotted to the recently procured Pierson-Sage Square or Hillhouse property. Alumni Hall was doomed, to allow the newly assured Wright Memorial Hall to rise phoenix-like from its ruins. The Taft Hotel was conceived, as a means of increasing the Prom. expenses, which had just been reduced by the first successful prohibition of flowers. Mr. George P. Day was appointed Treasurer to succeed Mr. McClung. For the benefit of our less fortunate Yalensian brothers, a catalogue of living non-graduates was compiled and first published. It being impossible to supply all the graduates with beds at reunion time, a Class Secretaries' Bureau was erected. The youthful University Press gave promise of much future success and is now surpassing expectations and Rosenberg. For the sake of higher art at Yale another wing was added to the Art School, which has enabled this department to soar well over many of our heads. Junior assistants were provided for most of the Senior coaches of the Freshman teams. The Yale Theatre Fund held the spotlight more successfully and seemed assured of ultimate completion. The Aero Club was formed and active interest in flying aroused. The Federated School and Sectional Clubs was organized to further Yale's interests throughout young America. The Oval question was defeated again, but campus attractions were increased by orchestra concerts on balmy spring evenings.

First hailed as upperclassmen, we beheld the Hutch abandoned and the Dean's office imported to Connecticut. To the chagrin of many sore swallows the Dwight Hall grill was closed at noon during the fall term, but re-opened after Christmas and much talk. President Hadley's report showed a five million dollar increase in the University endowment for the past five years, but more is still needed. The old New Haven House bit the dust and the foundations for the Taft Hotel were laid under the gaze of many idlers. The pass and honor system of grouping the students for a higher intellectual development was much discussed, but not adopted, in Junior year. Dormitory crew races were held in the Fall Regatta, and, shortly afterwards the new boathouse was opened. Chapel readers, excepting those in the pulpit, were made subject to a five-mark penalty but the Library was opened Sunday afternoons. Amidst the dirt and smoke of New Haven's famous, or rather notorious, old station, rumors of a new station were heard, and it is hoped the new edifice will be completed by the time our class contains the really and truly oldest living graduate. Likewise the Stadium question became prominent and took its place in undergraduate topics of conversation. A new curriculum system of majors and minors, only more so, was adopted, requiring two years of introductory work, followed by specialization in Junior and Senior years. The Debating Association finally landed on its feet with a system of consolidation and weekly smokers with the debates. Some of the class voted for campus concentration for Senior year, and ipso facto all the class was required to do so. Mory's threatened to close but still Louis lingers. Dean Phillips of the graduate School, who taught many of us calculus, announced his retirement, much to our sorrow. The News installed some bulletin boards and directories for the world at large. Secretary Stokes suggested Freshman Smokers, a plan not adopted until Senior year. For the Sunday exodusters and others Yale Station was left open later in the evening. The News tried six pages twice a week during the spring term, and rejoiced in the first Aero meet at Yale, which helped fill the paper. The question of Sheff major managers was debated en masse, but failed to gain the two-thirds majority endorsement necessary to win. The crew policy was expanded to include three races with three equally sad results. The Dramat. awarded its hundred-dollar prize for the first time. During the summer Alumni Hall was demolished and Farnam Hall renovated. Phi Beta Kappa adopted a new basis of election, which seemed to inspire the birth of Kappa Beta Phi at Yale.

As Seniors we first glanced upon the News as a six-cylinder hot-air-cooled machine, and wandered past many interesting pipes in the new Wright Hall foundations. The Sloane Laboratory was nearing completion, while the Cheapside of Grub Street was improved by the removal of the house that Jag built, to give University Avenue its former slant. After much exasperation, hesitation and impurgation, shower baths and electric lights were installed in Vanderbilt amid the tinkling of bells of the clanging telephones newly enshrined. Green grass, shrubs and little fences then rose where all was bare before, and, if one closed one's eyes, it was indeed the campus beautiful. Athletic facilities were augmented by the purchase of more land near Yale Field. Graduate coaches were appointed in crew and baseball as a departure from the more recent system. The Yale Review was reincarnated; the Record became Life-size; the Courant an illustrated magazine. The new hockey rink was built and used extensively. York Street dormitories were doomed, and Freshman Smokers inaugurated. Shortly after the Hyp. riot, the Elizabethan Club arose to calm the spirit of unrest, and its sedate quiet influenced a University mass meeting which endorsed the universal peace move. Our Senior Council restricted the number of legitimate campus solicitors. A proposition for two equal terms for the college year and an agitation for a Washington's Birthday holiday broke the winter's monotony. The Yale Press Club, the germ of a school for journalism, was founded, a cage for the baseball team, when not at large on the diamond, was constructed behind the gym, and a stadium assured. Polo was revived as a minor sport for minor sports. Jim Donnelly was selected to represent the Senior class at the Olympic Games. An effort to create a more spontaneous spirit of less seriousness was embalmed upon a pamphlet. Now as this goes to press, the question of Sheff. managers seems to be nearing a solution, and Yale is learning more and more how to survive without the active control of the Class of 1912.

OPINIONS ON COLLEGE QUESTIONS

After four years of undergraduate life at Yale, the Class must necessarily have formed some definite ideas in regard to college life, which will be of assistance to future generations. In the answers to eight significant questions, we have found an abundance of such valuable information. Inasmuch as certain of the answers are very personal, we are withholding all names.

The first question was: "What is your pointer to Freshmen?" Sixty-eight men emphatically answered in words to this effect: "Go in for some college activity; stick to it; work!" Evidently, college is no place for a lazy man. Nine advised them to "Make Phi Beta Kappa." A great many said: "Try to be something instead of do something." Among many other significant answers there were the following: "Study, and meet men"; "Less 'College Life'"; "Don't throw a bluff; don't be a politician"; "Be yourself"; "Avoid Chapel Street"; "Speak to everyone in your class"; "Make Yale proud of you"; "Make college a prep. school for life"; "Be cheerful"; "Be, first of all, a gentleman"; "Side step Beebe"; "Don't be too gay"; "Go slow"; "Go out for the News"; "Become Sophomores."

The second question was: "What do you most regret in your college course?" By far the most prevalent answer was one which will cause the professors to think that perhaps we have some sense after all. Thirty-five said: "Not having studied harder." Several replied: "Not being present at the Hyp. roughhouse." Others felt the following regrets most severely: "Not taking Greek"; "Nothing"; "Not entering from a big prep. school"; "Don't use regrets"; "Not having met Miss Chapman in Freshman year"; "Not having roomed on York Street in Freshman year"; "Not having made the News"; "Not having tried for Dramatics"; "Not having debated"; "Not having read more"; "My Freshman year"; "Loafing"; "Insufficiency intimacy with professors"; "My introduction to Messrs Kent, Huntington and Bennett"; "My laziness"; "Entering too young."

The third question was: "Most valuable thing you have obtained from your college career?" The most frequent answer here (seventy-two in all) was "Friendship." Thirty-five maintained "Self-reliance and experience." A few others instructive answers were: "That it is a good thing to let the other man do the talking"; "An election to the Elizabethan Club"; "Learning to 'read'."

The fourth question was: "What in your opinion is Yale's greatest need?" The needs are apparently rather material ones. Thirty-seven men said "Money." In most instances this money was for higher salaries for professors. Again they must feel that after all, we have a little common-sense. Strange to say, the second most frequent answer was "a stadium." As a result of this vote, the stadium has now been promised. Other bits of advice to the authorities were: "Better dormitory facilities;" "A new Dean"; "Closer union with Sheff.;" "More chance for the individual, less of a type"; "To remain the same old Yale as of old"; "More aesthetics"; "Uniformity in architecture"; "Compulsory athletics"; "More Dwight Hall spirit"; "Canteen on the Campus."

The fifth question asked, "How can a deeper interest in scholarship be cultivated?" The predominating answer was, "Excuse high-stand men from exams." Twenty-seven affirmed this. A second prevailing idea was that greater social honors should be tendered to high-stand men. Still another plan, about as prevalent as the latter, was that high-stand men should be granted more cuts and marks. Others were as follows: "Giving a Y for high scholarship." "A system of seating according to stand in class room work." "Weed out the dull professors." "By more instructors like Lewis, Kreider, Phelps and Tinker coming to Yale." "Establish a Dean's list like Harvard."

The sixth question was, "How can the Sunday exodus problem be solved?" In this case there was no predominating belief. One or more, however, subscribed to the following ideas: "Move Yale to New York and have a woman's college in New Haven"; "Sign book on campus Sunday morning"; "Compulsory chapel for Sheff.;" "Allow Seniors to be exempt from Sunday chapel"; "Move New York west 200 miles."

The seventh question was, "How would you bring Sheff. and Academic into closer relations?" Sixty-seven men said, "Make Sheff. a four-years course." Others suggested, "I would not"; "Have both at Chapel"; "Abolish Sheff." Many conceived that idea. "Educate Sheff.;" "By serving free drinks at chapel"; "By laying imaginary prejudices aside"; "Dispose of Director Chittenden."

The last question asked, "Why did you choose Yale in preference to other colleges?" As might be expected, democracy had the greatest influence. As in the other questions, however, there was individuality shown here, as the following: "Because I read its catalogue"; "Foolish question No. 1"; "Instinct"; "Because an older brother found that Harvard was N. G."; "Yale offers the best opportunities for one who has to work his way"; "My home is in New Haven, my father is a Yale Professor and my brother is a Yale man"; "Frank Merriwell came to Yale"; "Better known in England"; "The best is none too good"; "Cleveland a Yale city"; "Because I never heard of a better one"; "Yale is most well known in China"; "From what I saw of the Yale delegation at Northfield"; "Family relations for six generations"; "Because I exercised wisdom"; Connotation of Yale."
